

I strongly urge you to look seriously at the possible repercussions of the deregulation of the public air waves. Especially in rural areas, the information that is readily available is quite limited. In the event that there would be even less diversity from our information sources, it would be similar to censorship, perhaps not by the government but by corporations. This is a violation of our rights as citizens. Please think this over thoroughly, considering the affects on the quality of information and life on citizens not only corporations.

Sincerely,

Erin Murphy-McHenry
